NEW BUSINESS

AB 25-46 Steve Cochran – Use of Cyanide at Stibnite Mine (Presentation)

Steve Cochran and Leo Martinez of Orica/Cyanco, screen shared information on safe Cyanide Manufacture, Transportation and Use when separating Gold and Silver from ore. The Stibnite mine will adhere to the International Cyanide Management Code which reflects regulatory input from mining sites around the world. Those same sites are certified under this code from processing to transportation, handling and storage, operations, and emergency response.

Q. Where does the cyanide go when the mine is done with it?

A. It bonds with other materials to become an innate substance. Mining tailings will be monitored for discharged effluent into tailings; remaining cyanide is “destroyed”. Tailings dams are lined and sealed with plastics.

A copy of the Power Point presentation is available upon request from Belinda Provancher of Perpetua Resources and the City of Cascade.
